The Jeffrey Dallas Gay, Jr., Recovery Center, or J's Place, in Gainesville, Georgia, is an organization serving people in or seeking long-term recovery from alcohol and drug misuse. Our goal is to help ensure the success of people with substance use disorders by connecting them to local resources, addressing unmet community needs and providing a voice for those in recovery.

We provide a safe place to gather and provide:

- Nonclinical services to individuals and their families who are seeking or are in recovery
- Social support and connection to one another and to community resources
- Peer-to-peer coaching to encourage access to multiple pathways to recovery with certified peer recovery coaches
- Community events to remove stigma and connect the recovering community to the community-at-large J's Place offers regular opportunities to give and receive support including:
 - Individual and group peer recovery support services
 - Recreational, spiritual, social, and family activities
 - Meeting spaces for recovery groups such as 12-step, All Recovery & Family Support

J's Place gave me hope

J's Place not only has my trust and respect, but it has given me the tools, confidence, and self-esteem I need to feel a part of the community, instead of being a burden. J's Place gave me the drive to apply myself to the fullest. I've been clean and sober for two years now. I can manage my anger, I'm emotionally stable, I can connect with other people, and have a relationship that is not toxic. I believe in myself again. I have Jordan and J's Place to thank for this. I cannot ever repay this debt, except to keep doing what I'm doing. Most of all, it was proven to me recovery is not a dream. It is very well possible. That proof is from my life and the others I've seen being helped.

-Tony J.

Jeffrey's Story

On the outside Jeffrey would have appeared a typical 21-year-old. He split his time between school and a much loved job at Mellow Mushroom. He spent time with family and friends and seemed to have finally come into his own. But underneath that happy-go-lucky personality was an ongoing struggle with the disease of addiction. Jeffrey fought bravely against the demons of prescription drug abuse but lost his battle on October 19, 2012.

To honor Jeffrey's memory, three of his close friends started the Jeffrey Gay Memorial Golf Classic marking its 12th year this May. It is our mission to draw awareness to the ever-growing problem of alcohol and drug misuse and to give back to the community in a way that would make Jeffrey proud.
